Division 11, Administration and Supervision presents

Supporting Professional Performance in the Clinical Workplace

Register Early, space is limited!

Successful clinical practice in audiology and speech-language pathology requires not only a sound basis in the knowledge and skills associated with these professions but also a pragmatic understanding of the workplace behaviors and expectations that allow for professional practice. This course will explore the essential functions and workplace skills needed to foster professional growth and performance.

Presenters will discuss:

- “Essential Functions” underpinning professional practice in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology
- Employer expectations regarding workplace skills that transcend discipline-specific knowledge.
- Strategies for developing emergent professionalism in CSD graduate students
- Strategies for managing workplace behavior and fostering professionalism
- Opportunities for professional success for students and employees with disabilities.

Course Faculty:

Kevin M. McNamara M.A., CCC-SLP, Director, Center for Communication Disorders at Southern Connecticut State University
